

SOCIETY HAS A WARM WEEK

Weather and Other Things Combine to Set Blood to Moving.

LUNCHEONS AND THE LIKE MAKE THE BILL

Tennis Tournament Offers the Great Attraction to the People Who Like to Get Out and Make Much of It.

Love's Hour.

A. W. Utting in New York Times. We met, as other couples met, and strolled along the river's bank; I kissed your lips, you can forget the sweet delights my fancy drank.

August has nearly melted away and it will not be long before September will break forth and all society will be awakened. Many are returning to the city already, while the summer guests are preparing to depart for their homes.

One remarked the other day that it was extremely dull as far as formal affairs are concerned, yes, but when one sees the summer girl on picnics, automobile rides, moonlight drives, to the club in the afternoons, (discussing the "most popular girl," and "the best catch of the season") and last but not least, the informal parties, which, by the way, everything now is "informal," no matter how simple a function it may be, it seems a shame to hear, "oh, we are doing absolutely nothing."

A variety of amusements have helped to while the hours away the past week. Of course the tennis tournament was the main attraction. Every day saw a good crowd at the club, and towards the latter part of the week the people grew more and more enthusiastic, and the burst of applause and cheers were at times almost deafening. Each and every girl had her favorite. Should he win the game there was a look of "Well, I told you so," but should he make an error it was "I wonder why he did it," perhaps a long sigh; "He isn't his trying," or "He isn't simply rattled." When all the time the contestant is trying his utmost to win, and appear at his best before the anxious ones whose eyes are centered upon him.

It was a week of charming, but taken as a whole that is a charming way to entertain. The hostess at times almost can prove to her guests conversationalist, but can prove to her guests how artistic she may be in arranging the table decorations.

Watch for a run of bridge whist in Omaha the coming season. The game has just made its formal entrance into local society and all the elite are practicing up to shine at the tables when the indoor entertainment occupies the boards. "We always take up every new fad about the time it has had its go in other towns," remarked a debater of other days, "but we have this consolation—we get as much fun as excitement out of a discarded device as other places do out of it when it is brand new. We'll go wild over bridge, just as if it were an invention of our own, and no one else had ever touched it before. We played up ping pong last year after it was dead throughout the east. The trouble with us, however, is that we tire so quickly of each innovation."

Since so many engagements have been announced, everyone is anxious to know when the weddings are to take place, and as it is to be added to the list of the young matrons. At present date gossip has it rumored that another certain lawyer is very devoted to one of Omaha's fair daughters and we may soon look for an announcement.

The return from London of Mrs. Frank Avery has served as excuse for Chicago papers revamping the story of her disrupted engagement with Lieutenant William G. Deane of this city, which was expected for all it was worth a few months ago.
